ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Happenings That Affect the Dinner Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual—National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare

As Fortune put it, the slump in business was recently made official. This happened when Dr. Edwin Nourse, top economic advisor to the President, reported that the Federal Reserve Board's industrial production index had dropped to the lowest point since July of 1947. Dr. Nourse, who has never been regarded as a conservative in his economic views, urged the President to hold down Federal spending, and to go easy on urging increases in taxation.

U. S. News & World Report offered its view of the situation in these words: "The country, at this time, is in the middle of a tug of war between buyers out for lower prices and sellers trying to avoid price cuts. . . . Business is slowing in one line after another, while this price war goes on." The magazine then forecast that, before the end of 1949, the general price level will be 10 to 15 per cent below the postwar peak but still more than 30 per cent above the 1939 figure. It added: "When buyers are convinced that prices once again are firmly set, demand for goods is expected to revive and business to move ahead."

If this view proves to be the correct one, it is clear that the current slump is not the beginning of a depression. It is, instead, an adjustment of a boom condition which was based on a tenuous foundation. When the war ended, there had been four years of increasing shortages and the war-enforced cash savings of the people were at an all time high. The inevitable result was a buying spree that took in practically every kind of commodity, no matter how high the price or how poor the quality. Much of the money had now been spent, the shortages have almost all been made up, the national income is down from the peak, and the spending spree has come to an end.

During the course of the adjustment, the attitude of labor will be important—the cost of labor is a dominant factor in determining the selling price of the bulk of commodities. Some labor groups are now working for increased pay, but this is not universal by any means. A number of the top union officials are displaying considerable caution. In some lines, it is reported that productivity per manhour has been rising—when business slackens workers naturally put out more effort in order to keep their jobs. Also, the fairly substantial layoffs that have taken place in major industry have largely been confined to the least efficient workers, and the better men have remained on the job. Thus, labor costs may diminish in various fields, even though wage rates remain at high levels.

All in all, business trends are being watched with extreme care in all quarters. But there is little real pessimism.

CRIPPLED CHILDREN'S CAMP AT ROME OPENS SUNDAY

Mrs. Burton L. Preston, Executive Director of the Pine Tree Society for Crippled Children and Adults, Inc., has announced the opening of Pine Tree Camp for crippled children at North Pond, Maine, to be on July 3. Any crippled child between the age of 8 and 16 is eligible, and the camp is financed by Easter Seals and tuition is provided, if necessary, by the Society, the County Chapter of Infantile Paralysis and service clubs. TRUITT - GURNEY

Baskets of white gladioli, peonies and roses adorned the altar of the West Parish Congregational Church Sunday, when, at a three o'clock ceremony performed by the Rev. Kingsley W. Hawthorne, Miss Eleanor Gurney became the bride of Roscoe G. Truitt.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adney Gurney, and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Katherine Adams of Bethel.

Mrs. Norman E. Jordan of Auburn sang "Because" and "I Love You Truly" accompanied by Mrs. Donald Brown.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was beautiful in a gown of white satin fashioned with bustle effect, lace trimmed with sheer neckpiece. Her imported French finery veil of illusion fell from a crown of seed pearls and rhinestones, and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses and cascades of sweet peas on satin. Her only adornment was a single strand pearl necklace.

Attending the bride as maid of honor was Miss Marilyn Adams, sister of the groom, groomed in lilac organza, with matching picture hat, and carrying a colonial bouquet. Bridesmaids were Miss Arlene M. Carey of West Sumner and Miss Rachel Brown of Bethel. Their gowns were of yellow and aqua organza respectively, with matching picture hats and they carried colonial bouquets.

The flower girl was little Miss Linda Lee Paine, dressed in white organza and wearing a coronet of pink sweet peas in her hair.

Leland R. Brown of Bethel, was best man and ushers were Roger C. Adams, brother of the groom, Roland W. Glines and Edward P. Dorton, cousins of the groom, and Erlon A. Paine, friend of the groom.

At the reception held in the chapel of the church the bridal party was assisted in receiving guests by the bride's mother, wearing black and white crepe with a corsage of sweet heart roses and sweet peas and the mother of the groom, who wore rose and grey beanie with a corsage of gardenias and sweet peas.

Streamers of pale green and white, white wedding bells and bouquets of mixed flowers were attractively arranged in the chapel. Mrs. Lawrence Sanders was in charge of the guest book and Mrs. Earlon Paine and Mrs. Albert Buck the gift tables.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Leland Brown, Mrs. Wilfred Coolidge, Miss Marlene Anderson, and Miss Barbara Farrar.

The wedding cake was cut and served by Mrs. G. L. Thurston.

MAINE CITIZENS CONTRIBUTE 10,000 CARE PACKAGES

Recent introduction of a CARE "Thrill" package is confidently expected to boost 1949 CARE sales throughout Maine even beyond last year's peak.

Citizens of the Pine Tree State have so far contributed 10,220 to the total of almost eight million food and textile packages distributed by CARE among the needy of 16 overseas countries during the past three years.

CARE (Cooperative for American Remittances to Europe, Inc.) began its operations as a non-profit, government approved service in May, 1946. For the eight-month operation period of that year, Maine's share was 1,161 packages of CARE's total of 990,000 for the same period. In 1947, CARE sales in Maine jumped to 3,101, and reached a peak with 4,761 packages in 1948. For the first four months of the current year, Maine's CARE sales totalled 1,216 packages.

Most of these packages, either purchased by individual donors directly from CARE, or bought through contributions to CARE's member agencies, were standard CARE food packages at $10 each. In addition, many special British, Greek, Italian and Kosher food packages, as well as baby food, layette and textile packages went to make up Maine's total.

The "Thrill" package, at $3.50, was especially designed to permit Maine citizens to continue aiding friends and relatives abroad through the medium of CARE Orders for all these packages can be placed directly with CARE headquarters, 29 Broad Street, New York 5.

CARDINALS TO HOLD TRY-OUT CAMP AT LEWISTON JULY 11-12

Lewiston's Bates College athletic field will again be the scene of a baseball try-out camp to be conducted by the St. Louis Cardinals on July 11 and 12.

The St. Louis office of the penitentiary Red Birds has announced that scouts Joe Cusick and Jack Sturdy will be in Lewiston to conduct the camp. Both men have had professional experience, spending parts of their careers in the major leagues with the Cardinals. Cusick will be remembered by many as an outstanding athlete at Holy Cross from 1934 to 1936 whose career was climaxed when he was named catcher on the 1938 All-American baseball team.

The St. Louis organization is now maintaining 21 minor league clubs in its famous and far-flung farm system, and is continually on the lookout for good young playing talent to add to the rosters of those clubs.

Daily workouts, which will get under way at 11 a. m., will consist of drills in running and throwing, as well as fielding and hitting. They will be open to all boys 17 to 23 years of age who aspire to careers in professional baseball.

Those attending the camp are asked to bring their own baseball shoes and gloves, and uniforms if they have them. The Cardinals will refund all expenses incident to attending the camp for any players signing contracts.

The Songbook of the Bible.
Lesson for July 3: Psalms 67:1.
Memory Selection: Psalms 100:2.

The Psalms claim our attention in the third quarter. The book of Psalms is one of the most familiar of the Bible, providing the language of devotion for Christians and Jews. Seventy-three Psalms were written by David. The Psalms are the work of centuries.

The "Songbook of the Bible," the Psalms were used as constantly as the hymnals of the churches. They are written in the Hebrew form of poetry, called Parallelism, which lacks rhyme and depends for poetic effect upon the balancing of the lines. Jesus himself sometimes expressed himself in this form, as in the lines, "Ask, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you." (Matthew 7:7.)

In the first Psalm we find the picture of a gentleman whose title to distinction is in his goodness. His will being set in contrast with the state of the ungodly who are like "the chaff which the wind driveth away." The 67th Psalm, in its first verse, shows that praise is due unto God. His blessings are to be sought that His way may be known among the nations. And the peoples are exhorted to praise Him for needful good things.

On the eve of the Fourth of July let us think on the fact that the supreme need of the present is a return of the peoples of the nations to the Lord. This will far surpass all the means by which rulers and leaders are now depending to provide national security and bring world peace.

Dad's Quotation

People attending the Los Angeles traffic court were astonished to hear Traffic Judge Roger Pfaff quoting the late humorist, Will Rogers, to a violator.

The defendant, a former congressman, pleaded guilty to driving 55 miles an hour in a 25-mile zone. The judge fined him $40 for speeding, suspended his sentence for 30 days, and quoted the following advice: "Don't speed. Get up 15 minutes earlier."

The violator, who received the quotation with great seriousness, was Will Rogers, Jr. — Christian Science Monitor.

I REMEMBER...

By THE OLD-TIMERS

From George J. Baker of Chicago: "I remember when we boys carried 'sticking' tops with sharp points that would wedge into a board side-walk and play the game of seeing whose top we could split first. If you split the other fellow's top by dropping yours on his, he had a chance to try to split yours."

From Neil Callaghan of Miami, Fla.: "I remember 'way back when.' We didn't have flappers, we didn't have blues, and the women wore dresses 'way down to their shoes, and the men all wore derbies and a high-standin' collar. And you could rent a good room by the week for only a dollar."

"Once every year you went to a ball. The firemen's or policemen's, in the old village hall. The waltz and the quadrille, and the old square dance. Were the dances they danced when I was in knee-pants?"

From Gus Larson of Chicago: "I remember when we danced the Black Bottom, the Charleston, Ballin' the Jack, the Bunny Hug and Lindy Hop. That was in the days before the Big Apple and the Lambeth Walk."

From Mrs. Lydia Waglander of Dayton, Ky.: "I remember when my father, W. Willson, sold coal at $3.50 a ton. Loads were delivered in wagons drawn by two horses. The teamster made $10 a week and had six in his family."

OLSEN AND JOHNSON, those many characters who have built a reputation for being the greatest movie-makers and risk-takers in show business (long before Spike Jones even dreamed of a band), are bringing their madcap television this summer when they replace Milton Berle on NBC. The madcap team, together now for 26 years, should be the making of the breaking of video.

but at any rate they are bound to be more popular visual-wise than they ever were on radio, where imagination on the part of the public had to suffice.

PLATTER CHATTER

CAPITOL: "Gloomy Sunday," the suicide song that was banned for so many years, is back via a Charlie Barnet arrangement and it's sufficiently weird to continue chills where they left off some years back. The reverse has "Be Bop Spoken Here." A new song that's heading for the top is "Lover's Gold," yet, and Gordon MacRae has a smooth rendition of it backed by a cello. "Ting-a-Ling" Catch Jan Garber's excellent waxing of "Heart of Loch Lomond" with "That's When I Long for You" on the flip. And another good disc is the Starlighters' "Room Full of Roses" with "Wedding Day."

MERCURY: Benny Venuta gives a snap to two happy ditties, namely, "He's a Devil" and "Be My Little Baby Bumblebee." Ted Weems has come up with a new issue of "Canadian Gapers" with the perennial Elmo Tanner doing the whistling. The flip is a rather clever ballad called "Stammerin'." Flip Phillips does justice to a neat, instrumental arrangement of the fascinating "Caravan" with "Flying Home" on the reverse.

COLUMBIA: Another cute new song is "Scalawag" and one of the best waxings of it is Tommy Tucker's. He couples it neatly with "That Old Sweetheart of Mine." Kay Kyser has a mellow rendition of that oldie, "I Love You" with Harry Babbitt doing a nice job on the vocal. The flip has another oldie, "Sweet and Lovely."

"Ugh!.....foreigners!"

Ever since the Pilgrims landed, there have been those who called others "foreigners." Come to think of it, we're all foreigners, aren't we? Some of our families have been here longer than others—but at one time they, too, were foreigners.

We're all foreigners, more or less, but far more important—all Americans. So let's not think of others in terms of where their ancestors came from, or which church they go to. Let's think of everyone as individuals—as Americans.

Here are three ways each of us can help to keep the United States of America united:

1. ACCEPT—or reject—people on their individual worth.
2. DON'T LISTEN TO, or spread, rumors against a race, a religion, or a class.
3. SPEAK UP, wherever we are, against prejudice, and work for understanding.

Remember—

RUBBER PUCK

(A Short Story)

By RICHARD HILL WILKINSON

MORT LOBBELL rose from the ranks. The hockey ranks. First he was a mediocre defense on an unimportant midwestern sextet, and then suddenly, over night almost, he became a star. It was unanny. One of those things you read about. Within two months he was playing center for the Bay State Hawks.

Everyone who knew Mort hated him, especially his team mates, more especially members of the opposing team. He didn't play clean. He took advantage of every opportunity to slug, to injure an opponent. Philanthropy and sporting temper are frequent in hockey, but, in a sense, ex-usable. Hockey is a fast game. A player is active from the opening whistle, and when a man falls down the ice with the puck nestled against his stick, he's generating grim determination with every second of small wonder that he's apt to fly off the handle when suddenly without warning he runs full tilt into a man coming from the opposite direction.

Mort was beautiful, too. Arrogant and contemptuous of lesser figures in the public eye. He had a flare for being dramatic and spectacular. He went over the top, compensating for his ugly disposition by the number of goals he scored. His team mates, those old timers who had played along for years with the Bay State Hawks and weren't at all spectacular, but mighty dependable, took his abuse and held their peace. Oddly they had a sense of pride and loyalty for the team, and Mort Lobdell was bringing the team plenty of glory. But you knew that bitter passion existed in their breasts by the way they looked at him.

It was hard to believe. To the close observer Mort possessed no more than ordinary skill. One trick he had that was different. When carrying the puck he kept the elbow of his stick clamped down on top of the disk, rather than shoving it ahead.

Queer, but he seemed to do better that way. The man must have had an abnormal amount of strength in his wrists which he used to advantage, because thus held, the puck seemed in a vice-like grip, resisting the fiercest onslaughts. Others tried it, but without success. The old method of keeping the disk ahead of the stick seemed best.

It didn't occur to me to get suspicious. Not until the Montreal game. That night I had guests and was sitting in the $1.00 seats. Near us was an elderly couple with a pair of kids. Toward the middle of the second period the puck came flying through the air, lifted clear of the boards and dropped into the slot near where the elderly couple sat. The two kids made a dive for it, and for a few moments there was quite a lively time. In the melee the puck flew out of one of the youngsters' hands and dropped at my feet. Grinning I picked it up and was about to hand it back when I noticed something that caused my eyes to bulge. Instead of handing the puck back I gave the kids a dollar, hurriedly excused myself and went down to our dugout.

"Call Mort Lobdell off the ice," I told Roy Lacey. Roy looked at me in astonishment, and I repeated the order. There must have been something funny in the way I looked because Roy called Mort in without a word.

Howling as usual, Mort skated in and was about to sit down in the end seat. "Come with me a minute," I told him. "And you'd better come along too, Roy." I grabbed Mort's stick, "I'll take that."

Mort snarled out a protest and held the stick away. He looked ugly. Pucka nearby were watching us. "This fella up, Mort," I said quietly. "Unless you want to make a scene right here, you'd better hand over the stick."

For a minute Mort and I looked at each other, and I guess he sensed that I wasn't kidding. He handed over the stick and followed me back to the dressing room. When the three of us were alone I showed Mort's stick to Roy. A half inch of awl was protruding from the elbow. Other awls were driven into the wood. Then I showed him the puck, the surface of which contained several faint indentations.

"Get it?" I said. "This cute little hero inserts those awls into his stick before every game. Clamped down on the rubber puck it would take a pretty terrific stroke to get it loose. When the game's over he pounds the awl way in, so nobody will catch on. The puck being of rubber, the holes wouldn't be noticeable, and no one ever thinks of examining a used puck anyway."

... Oh, sure, the papers carried the story, and we had to give Mort police protection to the railroad station when the boys heard about it.

"HANDMAID BRIDES" . . . Elaine Noll, an ice-skating star, cuts a pretty figure here in her own version of the much-sought "handmaid bathing brief" down Miami Beach way.

"DREAM BRIDE" . . . Robert Hockley, 22, paralyzed war veteran for whom New Brunswick, N. J., residents built a $25,000 "dream" house, is shown with his bride of one month, the former Elaine Noll, 21. Also shown are best man H. L. King, who fought with Hockley on Okinawa where he was paralyzed by a Japanese bullet, and maid of honor Janet Dunbar.

"EASY DOES IT"

By HELEN HALE

KEEP REAMED OUT halves of lemon in the refrigerator wrapped in waxed paper. The skins may be grated to flavor soups, sauces and desserts. If you drop one of the halves in when apples or potatoes are cooking, these foods will stay white.

Cream which has turned sour may be flavored with lemon and used to season boiled potatoes and other vegetables. Add some chopped onion and other seasoning, if desired, and use as a salad dressing.

Keep nutmeats in a covered container in the refrigerator if you want to keep them sweet and crisp for a long period of time.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

Barbecued Chicken

(Serves 6)

- 1 3/4 pound chicken
- Paprika
- 3 tablespoons shortening
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup chili sauce
- 1 onion, minced
- 3 tablespoons vinegar
- 1 tablespoon water
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper

Cut chicken into serving size pieces. Sprinkle with paprika. Brown chicken in skillet in hot shortening. Add remaining ingredients. Bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) for 1 hour or until chicken is tender when pierced with a fork. Baste frequently with sauce in pan.

If maple syrup has molded on top, skim off the mold. If the syrup has been affected as to taste, bring it to a boil and store in the refrigerator until ready for use.

Scrub chicken feet thoroughly then boil in plenty of water with vegetables and seasonings. This makes a fine aspic to be used as a base for many meat and vegetable salads.

Cookies and small cakes stay fresher if you add one teaspoon of jam or jelly as a final ingredient before baking.

Marshmallows will not become hard as rocks if you keep them in a tightly-covered container while they are kept on a shelf. It's the air that dries them out.

When unsalted bread dries out, wrap it in a clean, fresh towel which is dampened and place in a warm oven until the towel is dry. The

Successful Parenthood

MRS. CATHERINE CONRAD EDWARDS

Associate Editor, Parents' Magazine

DO YOUR CHILDREN always seem to be wanting something? If it isn't a new bike, it's a chemical set, and if it isn't a permanent wave, it's likely to be ankletrap shoes. And so on, through all the ups and downs of youthful hobbies and fads.

But over and beyond the material possessions, in what might be called the "social sphere," there is one thing our boys and girls all want, all the time—to be popular with their friends, classmates, and the folks in the neighborhood. The urge to be liked and admired has probably caused more anxious moments to youngsters and parents alike than any other desire of childhood.

When your boy or girl turns to you for help on how to be popular, what can you say? It's a tough subject, as many a lonely grownup has discovered. Here are a few tips that may help:

First of all, let's think for a moment about that lovable American, Will Rogers. There's a postage stamp out with his picture on it, which brings him especially to mind. On this stamp is the motto which guided Will Rogers' success—and one that all of us may well take to heart: "I never met a man I didn't like." In other words, when you have a warm and friendly outlook, when you start out with a lively interest in others and a readiness to look for the best that's in them, rather than the other way around—then you are on the right track to popularity.

Most children have noticed for themselves that popular folks are usually generous. Not just in sharing their chewing gum and candy and "comic" books—but in being "good pals."

A "good pal" helps his friends. He pitches in on jobs like helping Jim clean up the cellar, when everyone's waiting for Jim to play football. He's at the door with a couple of his favorite books or a new set of puzzles when Jim is sick in bed. Real generosity means sharing your time and energy as well as just your possessions.

And above all, a generous boy or girl has no prejudices. Snide remarks about people of other races and faiths are strictly out. Any sensible youngster knows that once he starts making nasty cracks about others, he's likely to be regarded with suspicion even by his own friends.

It's only natural for people to think: "If that's the way he talks about Dick, what does he say about me when my back is turned?"

There's another form of generosity that children usually have to be taught—and that is giving praise. It isn't always easy, if you've worked hard to win a game, to praise the player who's defeated you. But a friendly backslap, with "Good work, Charley!" soon wins for a boy a reputation for good sportsmanship.

And the girl who has had to wear an old dress to a dance and who can't warm, but not gushingly, tell a friend how nice she looks in her new frock has a warmth about her that won't go unnoticed.

It's sign posts like these that point the way to popularity. As good parents, we can make sure they are noticed by our children.

Tuesday, June 1

We are here at Del Sur, which is something we did not expect when we left N. York, as we were assured the S. S. Lewis would be here waiting our arrival. Del Sur is quite a Village having some 50 to 75 buildings, all the best of which are Hotels. It is situated on the Pacific Ocean 700 miles above Panama. There is a beautiful little Harbor here extending inland about 1/4 mile & its breadth about the same. We are located right abreast of the Harbor and the Surf at high tide breaks near our door and makes a continuous noise like a large waterfall. It is a very warm place and quite sticky. Owing to its being surrounded by high hills and the impurity of the water, which like all I have tasted since I have been in Central America, is the meanest I ever knew. There are many sick here now & if we are compelled to stay here many days I fear many must leave their bodies here far from their home & kindred & friends. We left one man at Virgin Bay by the name of Wright and a fine Boy of Mrs. Chase's, whom I never expect to see more & whose may be the lot is quite sure we cannot tell, & rejoice it is so, for all are too unhappy now for their health.

Wednesday, June 2.

This day has been quite rainy & disagreeable, nothing of importance has occurred, except a mass meeting of the passengers to take into consideration their situation and the treatment they have recd. at the hands of the officers and agent of this line. A committee was appointed of one from each state of which I had the honor to be chairman to report a preamble & resolution expressive of our feelings of the treatment we have recd. since we left N. York. At this meeting I made the only speech that was made and of which I have reasons to feel elated. I felt deeply an interest in our situation and but few dry eyes were to be seen.

Thursday, June 3.

Last evening about 7 o'clock we were informed that a passenger from Pa. had just paid the debt of nature by yielding up his breath to his Maker. His disease was the fever of the climate. He died in the Lafayette House where I board. This is the first death that has occurred since we left N. York, but perhaps 100 of our number are sick and probably are one week's end many more will pass from this world to that country from whose bourne no traveller returns. This A. M., the committee on Resolutions assembled at the Lafayette Hotel & chose a committee of 3 to draft Resolutions & Report to the General Com. at 2 o'clock P. M. I was chosen Chairman. B. D. Brigham of N. H. and Mr. _____ of Michigan associate. We retired to my Room and I was compelled to draft the Resolutions and preamble, at the adjournment they were Reported & by the Committee accepted. Last night the Pacific Steamship arrived from San Francisco and was announced by the discharge of Cannon. This aroused the Passengers & all were filled with hope supposing it might be the S. S. Lewis. But upon inspection at day light we found it not to be the Lewis but the Pacific. The hopes thus suddenly excited to fever heat fell down to zero. At about 12 noon a committee was chosen of five of which I was appointed Chairman to visit the Captain of the Pacific & try to induce him to take us on board & proceed immediately to Cal. But after a long interview we were unable to effect our object. Again at 4 o'clock another Committee was chosen to visit the Steam Ship & demand of the Capt. that he should relieve our Situation, but the committee concluded to defer it till morning. Our passengers are getting desperate, are only restrained from violent acts by the cautious and calculating.

IDAHO - THE FAMILY VACATION STATE

Freshened with waters unlocked by spring, Idaho's Shoshone Falls, the "Niagara of the West," send spray high into the Snake River canyon near the city of Twin Falls. One of the major waterfalls of the world, Shoshone leaps 212 feet—42 feet higher than Niagara.

BOISE, IDA.—Idaho, with more than 60 major resorts in five well-defined vacation areas, is preparing to make a bid during the 1949 summer tourist season as the "family vacation state."

The Gem state will rely on a variety of scenic wares to please its family guests, according to the Idaho state board of publicity. There's fishing in some of the west's greatest trout streams and lakes for Dad, trailrides and hikes in 16 national forests for the youngsters and some 65,000 square miles in which Mother can "window shop" at scenery from the family car.

Resorts Open For Business.

Resorts have opened in Idaho's West Yellowstone area, the Sawtooth mountain vacationland, the Salmon river primitive country, North Idaho scenic land and in the Payette Lakes resort area. Most lodges have been open since mid-May.

Idaho's general fishing season has been open since June 4 in most of the state's 1,763 lakes and its 6,500 rivers and streams.

License sale to anglers this year is expected to be well over the record 200,000 sold during 1948.

Tourist fishing permits, good for five days, will sell again this year for $3.

Heralding the coming of spring—and the vacation season—in Idaho are some of the best wildflower displays in years, including acres of the unusual wild buckwheat that flourish at the peak of their display in June amid the weird volcanic desolation of Idaho's Craters of the Moon national monument. The craters are just a few miles west of where the atomic energy commission plans to locate its new half-billion dollar reactor plant.

At its best as a tourist spectacle during April and May is Idaho's "Niagara of the West"—Shoshone Falls of the Snake River near the city of Twin Falls. Shoshone plunges 212 feet over a horseshoe-rim nearly 1,000 feet wide.

Expected to carry the bulk of Idaho's 1949 tourist traffic are U. S. Highway 95, extending from the Canadian border to the Oregon border near Boise, longest of Idaho's arterial routes, and U. S. 91-101, the route leading across southeastern Idaho, to the west entrance of Yellowstone park, most popular gateway to the national park.

U. S. 20-30 extends the width of the state from the Pacific coast to Boise and across southern Idaho. U. S. Highways 2 and 10 take the traveler across the scenic lake country of north Idaho's panhandle.

Nobody's Business

The practice of riding bicycles on the village sidewalks is again causing concern to some of the non-cycling citizenry. And we understand and are in sympathy with their attitude. So far as we know there is no excuse for bike riding on the sidewalks. The only reason we have heard of is that it's safer for the riders than if they were in the streets. Perhaps, but all too many of these riders show little regard for those who walk. With a little advice and/or discipline at home there are few riders who could not safely use the streets.

The by-laws of the Bethel Village Corporation state that no person shall ride a bicycle upon any sidewalk within the limits of the Corporation, and persons violating this provision shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $10.

In recent years bicycle riders also have become a problem on highways as well. Generally speaking an older rider will keep to the right, as he learned to do while driving a car or team. The actions of younger riders, however, are most unpredictable. A single cyclist is as likely to keep to the left of the road as to the right. Two are quite likely to go both ways and larger groups may decide to hold both sides and the middle. Bike parking practices too often show little or no consideration for others. It is not uncommon for the entrance to a business place to be blocked by one or more bicycles. It is surprising how few parents are interested enough in the safety of their children to give them instruction in the rules of the road and common courtesy to others.

Many Bethel people are wondering what degree of "law and order" will prevail during the coming holiday week end. As in many other towns last year's extended "observance" of the Fourth was considered by many to be no credit to the community. As a result several towns voted last March to ban the sale and use of fireworks, only allowing a fireworks display in the hands of responsible parties. In some cases this program will be put on as a community project or by an organization. In Bethel this was not a part of the warrant for the annual meeting and of course no action was taken. A law passed by the legislature this year provided for a state-wide ban similar to that adopted by many towns.

BETHEL VALUATION UP—TAX RATE DROPS

Property to the amount of $117,450 was added to Bethel's town books in the assessment just completed, with the result that the tax rate dropped from $64 per $1,000 of valuation in 1948 to $57. The town's total valuation of real and personal estate is $1,059,032. The increase was found largely in new building during the year and greater quantities of finished lumber on hand April 1.

STORM URGES TO LEAVE "ORPHANED" FAWNS ALONE

Inland Fisheries and Game Commissioner George J. Stobie urges the public to refrain from fawn-napping (the practice of picking up supposedly orphaned fawns along the roadside). The commissioner said mother does are in the area almost invariably.

Picked up and separated from their mothers, the small fawns must be cared for by Kfir Beck, Mt. Vernon, who has to feed the fawns with nursing bottles and later wean them and still provide costly food. "They are a great care," Stobie stated. "Only this week, Warden Supervisor Arthur Rogers, Waterville, reports three more fawns picked up by misguided persons. Warden Supervisor Wayne L. Lindsay, West Paris, reports another trio of fawns picked up in his area and turned over to the state."

In the spring of next year, these deer will have to be released by Beck at still further expense, the Commissioner explained, to make room for fawns that will be picked up then.

APPLE FRUIT FLY WILL EMERGE SOON

The time is drawing near when fruit flies will emerge in Maine apple orchards.

As soon as the flies begin to emerge the trees should be protected by a deposit of lead arsenate spray and the protection should be continued through the rest of the spray season.

Ordinarily two applications of a spray containing three pounds of lead arsenate per 100 gallons will keep the fruit fly under control in commercial orchards. Two or three applications of 15 per cent lead arsenate dust may be used instead of the liquid sprays.

In orchards where fruit fly has been a problem in past years, one
